1. In the fall of 1948, the Central Committee of the ORPS (Obsht Rabotnicheski Profesionalen Soyuz; General Workers Professional Union), on orders from the Ministry of Construction sent a circular to its sub-organizations to recruit candidates for State scholarships at various schools throughout the country.

2. Since the State Technical Construction High School starts with the tenth grade, those students who had only a progymnasium education (seventh grade) were required to take special gymnasium courses for completing the eighth and ninth grade study material.
3. During the 1949-1950 school year, the students were taught in a room in the basement of the Girls' Gymnasium on Voynishka Street because the Technical School buildings were occupied by the Workers' Faculty. When the new building of the Technical School was completed "in the near future", the old premises were to be made available to the Commercial Gymnasium. From the first, the students lived in the Communal Home at No. 45 Aleksandur Dyankovich Street which is the property of the State Construction Union in Varna. A course for construction cadres for the State Construction Union was taught on the first floor and the dormitory occupied the second floor rooms.
4. The school day was five hours long, classes being offered in the morning one week and in the afternoon the next week. Two hours each week were devoted to listening to political news. At these sessions, the Western countries were rebuked and the Soviet Union was praised. On Saturday, after the school hours were over, there was a half-hour report on the educational progress of the students during the week; students who had attended classes without having studied their lessons, had received low grades, were absent from class, or had not attended a labor campaign or a meeting, etc. were criticized. In addition, one of the students gave a report on the conditions in other countries, stressing the peaceful construction work in the New Democracy countries headed by the Soviet Union, and emphasizing as well the "condition of impasse" in the Western Democracies headed by the United States. The Western Democracies were pictured as making every effort to stop the construction work and peaceful development of the New Democracies. The student council arranged for group attendance at Russian pictures which emphasized the good qualities of the Soviet Army or the Soviet intelligence service. Such movies as "The Exploit of the Reconnoiter," "The Elbe Conference," "The Duel," "The Plot of the Doomed," etc. were shown.

5. The instructors constantly tried to inculcate a feeling of hatred for the Western Democracies and faithfulness only to the Soviet Union.
6. During the free morning or afternoon hours, the students prepared their lessons for the coming day. A cultural-educational meeting and an organizational meeting were each held once a week. During the 1949-1950 school year, all the students of informant's grade were supposed to take special courses concerning the Constitution of the DSNM (Dimitrovski Suyuz na Narodnata Mladezh; Dimitrov Union of the People's Youth) and the biographies of Stalin, Lenin, Dimitrov, Kolarov, Chervenkov, etc. Those who took the courses were assigned lecturers on the subjects of similar courses which were attended by the pupils of each grade of the gymnasium.
7. In 1950, the 2-year Party School was opened in the Communal Home for the purpose of teaching the students the history of the Bolshevik Party from the Revolutionary period to the present. All students at the State Construction Technical High School, with no exceptions, were required to take an examination before a committee appointed by the Town Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party.
